Why Denver Matters

On the scale of expectations, Denver should fail. The gold rush is over and a lot of the business and industry that it depended on has left town. The city lost its competitive advantage – but it came back. It was one thing – and it became another. Denver discovered that active, edgy and cool people love cities – and cities love them back. A quirky, fun and energetic vibe abounds in this city. It is not perfect and knows it. The mayor rides a scooter, brewpubs are everywhere, you can get on the ski train downtown, the great outdoors is top of mind. Successes include loft living, LoDo, mass transit/high speed rail, the new economy, arts & media, weather and the airport. This city “gets it” and has great neighborhoods (like LoDo) and also has one of the most significant urban art scenes (visual and performing) in the country. And the weather! Such a walkable city with mostly days of sunshine and clean mountain air.
